Charmers: Simplicity is charming.
Alexandra Kell.

After creating each of the pieces I needed, including making the hoops for the charms to hook to the bracelet links I was able to put the model together into a cohesive piece that formed the whole charm bracelet.

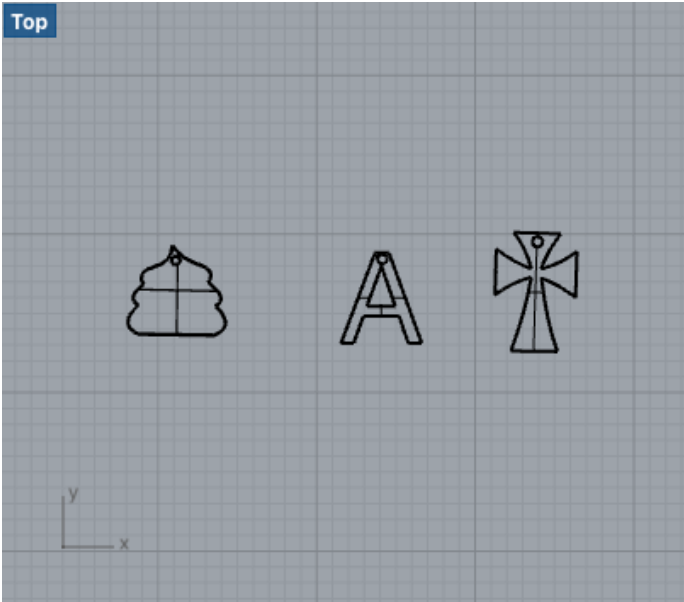

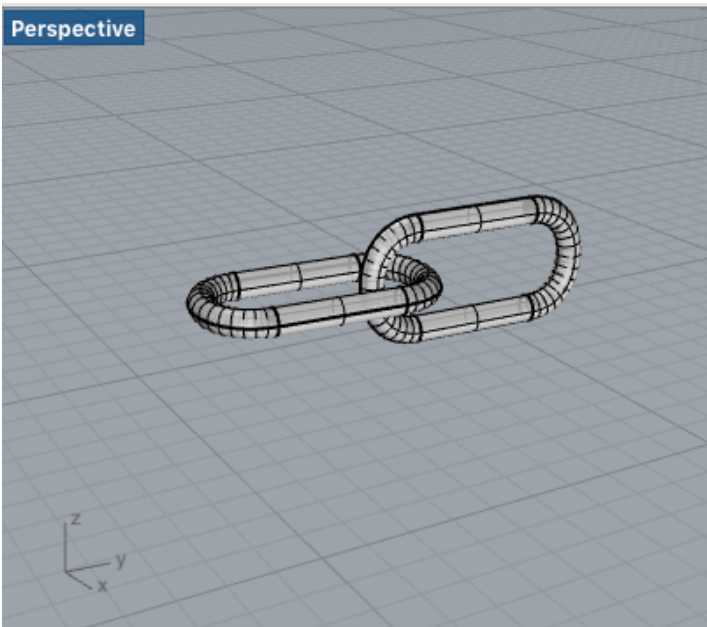

Through this project, I was able to create a cohesive object that used different 3D modeling tools and strategies. With these strategies, I was able to complete an object that not only helped me learn about these forms, but also had personal meaning. I made 3 different charms that each had a different meaning to me; the poop emoji is just something I love. The A is the first letter of my name, and the cross is something I am passionate about.

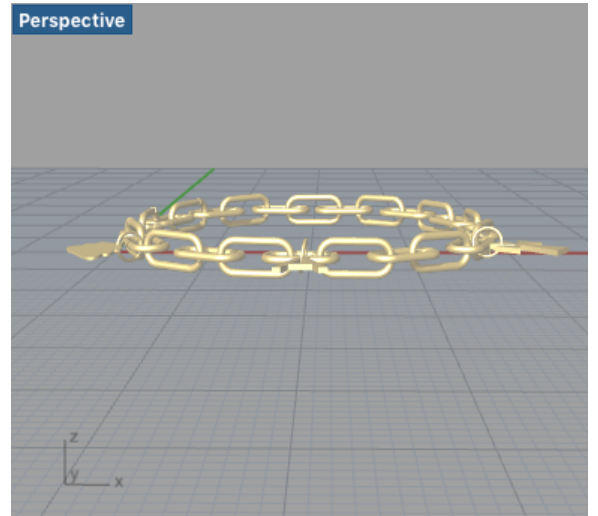

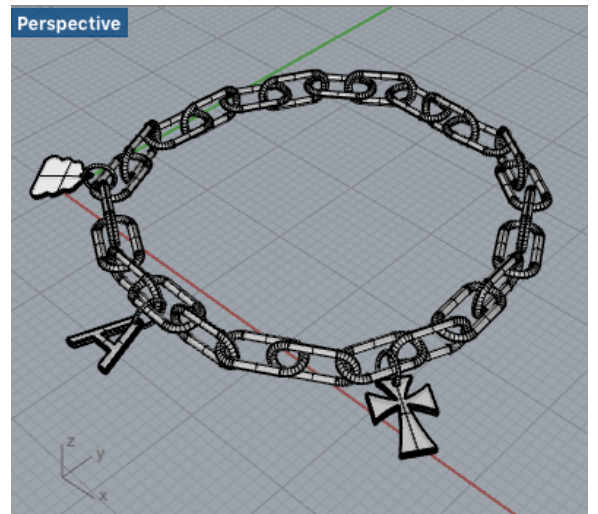

Second, I was able to use my knowledge and new concepts I had learned to create the basis of the bracelet; the links to form the actual bracelet.
